We couldn't score an interview with Jay-Z. How would you do it?

Ana: I look like Beyonce, so I'd just pull a bait and switch. Well, I'd look like Beyonce if she had a completely different face and body.

Scott: I'd tell him I'd tweet everything he said. Oh wait, I would anyway.

Joel Toledo (@jt312): Enter an Empire state of mind, which I guess means dressing up as Darth Vader.

What's a symptom that you have March Madness?

Ana: You realize in April that you no longer have a fish or a girlfriend.

Scott: You dribble everything that's round.

Chris Johnson (@randomnickname): You start retroactively caring about your alma mater again.

Ke$ha vs. Lady Gaga. Go.

Ana: Tik tok goes Ke$ha's fame clock.

Scott: Ke$ha loses automatically for having a dollar sign in her name. Dumb.

Brandon Roberts (@yourretrocareer): Neither. Awaiting the day they end up on "Dancing With the Stars."

Tenacious D

One tricked-out alien movie cashes in and suddenly it's a 3-for-all

By Erin Sarris

FOR REDEYE

Chris Medina has a 3-D problem.

Every time he sees a movie with the special effect, his vision is blurry and his balance is unsteady for hours after the credits roll. Medina describes it as a "3-D hangover," yet he can't stop going back to the theater.

"It's a lot more fun and interactive than a regular movie," he said. "[Audiences] want something bigger and better, and 3-D is better."

Not only is Medina, 22, willing to endure the physical side effects of seeing a movie in 3-D, he'll even plunk down extra money for the privilege.

In the past year, the Ukrainian Village resident has donned 3-D glasses for "Avatar"—twice—as well as for "Alice in Wonderland," "Up," "Coraline" and "My Bloody Valentine."

While movie buffs such as Medina embrace the evolving technology that gives viewers the sensation of depth in traditionally 2-D media, the entertainment industry is thinking outside the cineplex in a quest to find more ways to cash in.

Seemingly every day, there is an announcement about a new project looking to get a piece of the 3-D action. Check out just a handful of the more recent stories that generated three-dimensional buzz:

» Panasonic and Samsung began selling 3-D TV packages last week for about $3,000 each. That's at least $500 more than a comparably sized standard TV and Blu-ray player. Sony will have its 3-D TVs on the market in June.

» The NCAA men's basketball Final Four in April will be broadcast live in 3-D at select theaters.

» Comcast will broadcast the Masters, featuring Tiger Woods' return to golf, for free next month to its customers with 3-D sets. A feed also will be available on the golf tournament's Web site.

» Lady Gaga is planning a 3-D concert tour

HIGH EXPECTATIONS FOR TV

Samsung, the world's largest maker of TVs, has high hopes for 3-D. Tim Baxter, head of the company's U.S. electronics division, said he expects 3-D systems to be in 3 million to 4 million of the 35 million TV sets sold in the U.S. this year by all manufacturers.

and DVD, MTV reported, though details on how a 3-D concert would work were sketchy.

Blame Hollywood for the 3-D explosion. There were 20 movies released in 3-D last year, including the alien opus "Avatar" and animated "Up." That's an increase from eight in 2008.

Although 3-D movies represented less than 4 percent of the 558 films released all year, they accounted for $1.14 billion, or 11 percent of the $10.6 billion total box office haul in the U.S. and Canada. In fact, the bulk of the $1 billion increase in North American ticket sales is attributable to the 3-D movies; box office sales for 2-D movies increased by only about $70 million over 2008.

But can 3-D make the transition to TV?

One challenge will be that the 3-D effect requires viewers to wear relatively bulky battery-operated glasses that need to be recharged occasionally. They are not like the cheap throw-aways that have been used in theaters since the 1950s.

When you're wearing these 3-D TV glasses, room lights and computer screens may look like they're flickering, making it difficult to combine 3-D viewing with other household activities. Anyone who's not wearing the glasses when the set is in 3-D mode will see a blurry screen. (The sets can be used in 2-D mode as well, with no glasses required.)

Those inconveniences are a deal-breaker for Kevin Ammons of Forest Park.

"At the theater, you have a large screen, massive surround sound and no distractions in a dark room," said Ammons, 31, who saw "Avatar"

From movies to sports to concerts, 3-D glasses are becoming more in demand, both in theaters and in homes. GETTY IMAGES PHOTOS and "Alice in Wonderland" in 3-D. "At home, you're watching it 15 feet away, your cell phone is going off, your dog is running around. It's too distracting."

There's also a notable lack of 3-D material.

To give buyers something to watch, Samsung is including a 3-D copy of "Monsters vs. Aliens" on Blu-ray disc with its packages, in a deal with the studio, DreamWorks. Its CEO, Jeffrey Katzenberg, said it will convert its "Shrek" movies to 3-D for Samsung TV buyers later this year.

To 3-D or not to 3-D?

As long as the entertainment world is geeking out over 3-D, we should put in some requests for programs we think could use that extra dimensional upgrade. RedEye has some suggestions for pop culture faves we want to see in 3-D—plus some pleas for other stuff we NEVER want to see rushing toward us in virtual space. REDEYE

WE'D FLOCK TO ...

'Shark Week'

It's only a matter of time before the Discovery Channel takes this wicked (awesome) plunge.

The Super Bowl

If any sporting event deserves to get the 3-D treatment, it's this spectacle of oversized athletes with a history of fleeting halftime nudity.

'Victoria's Secret Fashion Show'

Memo to CBS: Those fashions would look cute in 3-D. (What, you expected a boob joke?)

'The Deadliest Catch'

Stock up on motion sickness meds before you try watching this reality show.

People magazine

Scrutinizing celebrities' faces for flaws would be much easier this way.

Clash of the blockbusters

Movies in 3-D are becoming such big moneymakers that Hollywood studios are cramming them into the nation's theaters, even though there aren't enough screens available to give each film its fullest run.

"Avatar" director James Cameron estimated his movie lost "a couple hundred million dollars" when some 3-D-capable theaters were switched to "Alice in Wonderland."

Now he's considering re-releasing "Avatar" in the fall with extra footage. "The question [is] is the appetite still going to be there after the summer glut of movies," he said.

As blockbuster season approaches, check out some numbers on the nation's 3-D preparedness. REDEYE, AP

3,000 to 10,000

Typical number of screens for a movie in wide release in North America.

3,900 to 4,000

Number of 3-D-ready screens expected to be available in the U.S. and Canada by March's end.

$70,000

Approximate cost of upgrading a screen to 3-D capability.

800

Number of 3-D screens used for "Journey to the Center of the Earth" two years ago. In two weeks, "Clash of the Titans" will have 1,200 screens available.

Nineteen

Number of 3-D movies scheduled for release this year, including "How to Train Your Dragon" on Friday and "Clash of the Titans" on April 2.

"We continue to see this amazing level of enthusiasm and excitement for 3-D. The rate of adoption for this into the cinema has been a rocket ship these last couple of months," Katzenberg said.

Eventually, sports and other programming that will benefit from a more immersive experience should be offered in 3-D. ESPN has said it will start a channel that will broadcast live events using the technology, starting with FIFA World Cup soccer in June. The sets also could be used for 3-D video games, when game consoles catch up to the new technology.

Even if they do end up giving him more 3-D hangovers, Medina is sold on the next generation of TVs.

"If I had to buy another TV right now, I'd want to buy one that was equipped to handle 3-D so I can still feel good about the purchase in a couple years," he said. "Kinda like preparing for the future."

Hungry like a wolf

By Bruce Dancis

MCT

Do you have to be 1) a believer in vampires, 2) a believer in werewolves, and 3) a teenage girl to enjoy "The Twilight Saga: New Moon"?

After watching "Twilight," the first movie based on Stephenie Meyer's best-selling young adult book series about teenage romance, chastity and biting in the Pacific Northwest, my answer would have been "no."

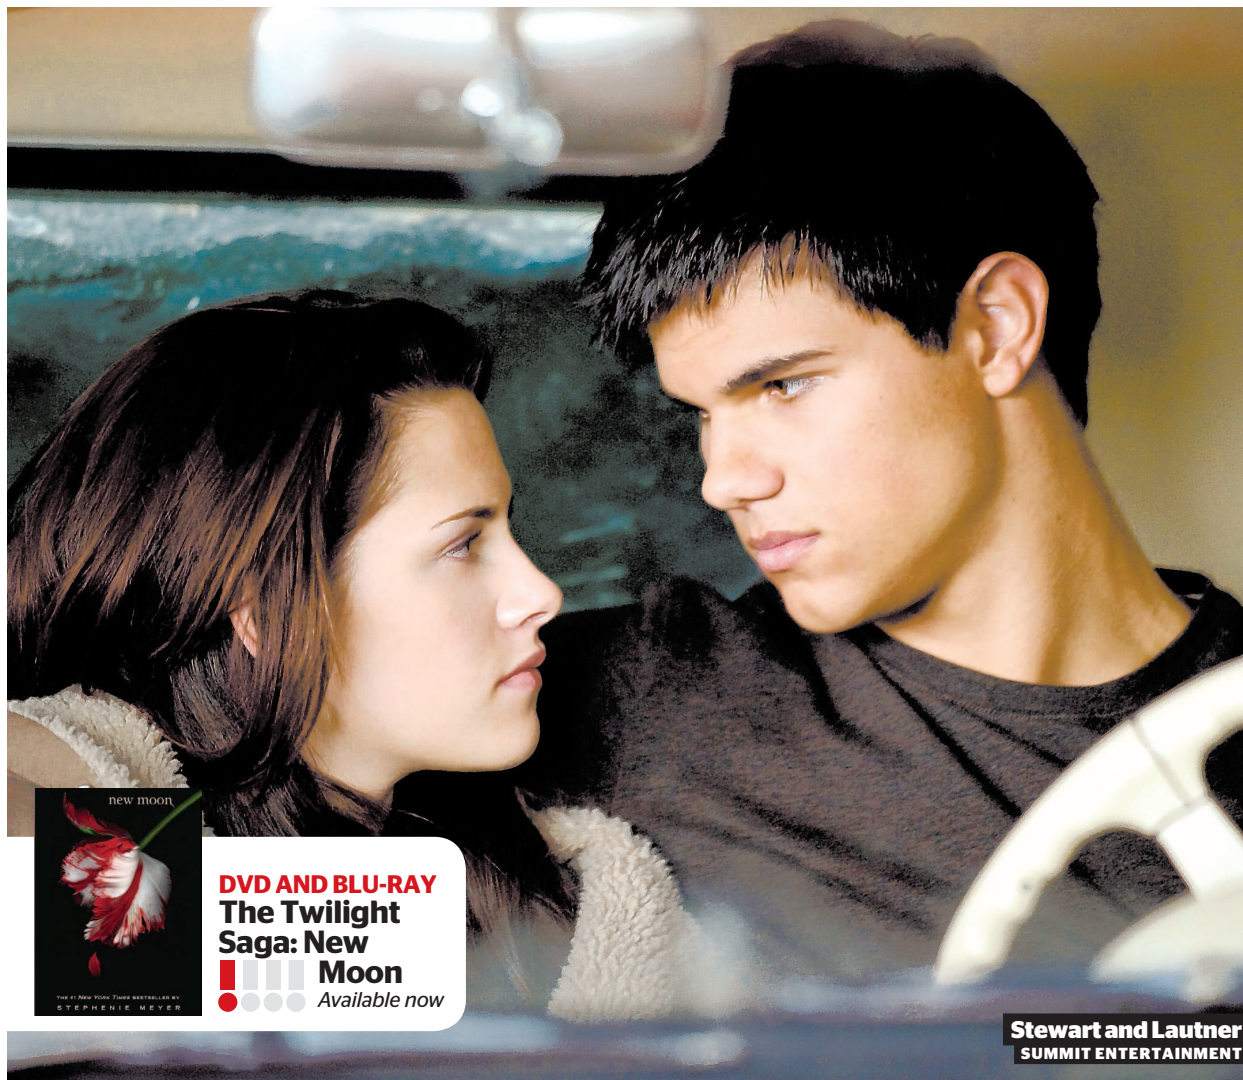

Unfortunately, all of the hard-won suspension of disbelief achieved in "Twilight" is squandered by its sequel, "The Twilight Saga: New Moon."

Like the first film, "New Moon" is set in the small town of Forks in rural western Washington State, near Port Angeles, where the teen-aged Bella had gone to live with her dad (Billy Burke), the local chief of police.

After an incident involving Bella and Edward's vampire family almost turns our heroine into a meal, Edward (Robert Pattinson) decides that in order to save his beloved, he must leave Bella and never see her again.

Naturally, this does not go over well with the love-stricken Bella, who mopes for months and has terrible nightmares. She starts having hallucinations of Edward warning her whenever she places herself in dangerous situations. Bella also gets closer to Jacob (Taylor Lautner), who has barely concealed his love for her.

The main problem with the film is that while absence (and abstinence) may make the heart grow fonder, it doesn't prevent "New Moon" from getting awfully tedious for long periods of time.

TV Breaking Bad

9 p.m. Sunday, AMC

Chemistry teacher Walter White (Bryan Cranston) can't catch a break. He started making meth to earn enough money to support his family when lung cancer kills him. Now he's got half a million in cash and his cancer is in remission, but his wife wants a divorce and two menacing Mexican drug cartel killers are hunting him. Vince Gilligan takes risks like no other TV producer, but it pays off. Watching "BB" is an enthralling and darkly humorous emotional workout. CURT WAGNER, REDEYE

ALBUM The Big To-Do

Drive-By Truckers

"The Big To-Do" isn't as ambitious as the accurately named "Southern Rock Opera" or the expansive "The Dirty South." But the Truckers' vision is downsized skillfully, focusing on storytelling, especially in the ripped-from-the-headlines murderous tale "The Wig He Made Her Wear" and the dark, deflated dreaminess of "The Flying Wallendas." GLENN GAMBOA, NEWSDAY

TV Kirstie Alley's Big Life

9 p.m. Sunday, A&E

Kirstie Alley has a big bottom, but her largest asset is her personality. And in "Big Life," a "reality" repeat of her 2005 scripted series "Fat Actress," the comedy heavyweight comes across as funny and self-deprecating as she fights the battle of the bulge. Have no doubt that you're being played; I'm betting she wouldn't have a gay apprentice-assistant or an even fatter handyman without the show. But her children, Lillie and True, are real and sharp-tongued like mom. And her pet lemurs are just as ridiculous. CURT WAGNER, REDEYE

BOOK The Moment of 'Psycho'

David Thomson

anniversary tribute to the breakthrough movie of the '60s unspools with insight and affection. Thomson does go on some curious tangents and silly stretches. But "The Moment of 'Psycho'" makes you want to revisit the landmark shocker. PETER M. GIANOTTI, NEWSDAY

VIDEO GAME God of War III

PlayStation 3

Kratos does encounter some puzzles, especially after stumbling into Daedalus' labyrinth late in the game, but none is particularly demanding. Indeed, what's most dissatisfying about "God of War III" is its insistence that you do exactly what its designers want you to do; you can't even adjust the camera angles. Sure, you can switch among four different weapons, but three of them feel almost identical. Visually, this is a dazzling showcase for the PS3, but the core gameplay hasn't evolved since the first chapter. LOU KESTEN, AP

Veg out with indoor container gardens

Container gardening is perfect for renters, because potted plants can grow on a deck, patio or sunny indoor spot. If you want to start an herb or vegetable garden, all you really need is high-quality compost soil (available at any garden store), seeds or sprouts, and a planter with drainage. A hand-held garden claw also is useful for gently turning the surface soil every once in a while to aerate the roots.

Find a spot for your plants that gets good sun—at least a few hours per day for herbs, more for deep-potted vegetables such as tomatoes—and make sure to water them when the surface soil feels like it's beginning to dry out. Worried about over or under-watering? Here are a few foolproof kits for beginners.

Simple Garden by FertileEarth

$25, thesimplegarden.com

This self-contained system comes with a recycled plastic planter, a cube of soil, seed packets and color-coded instructions for planting. If you're low on light, you can buy an additional grow light for $25, and if you've got a black thumb, you can purchase a $15 sensor stick that lets you know when to water your garden.

Potato Grow Bag at Gardener's Supply

$12.95, gardeners.com

Potatoes might not be the first thing you'd think about growing on your porch, but if you have a corner of space that gets full sun, they're fairly easy to care for. Gardener's Supply sells porous fabric bags designed to hold soil, fertilizer and seed potatoes. After a frost-free growing season of three to four months, the bag should yield 7 to 13 pounds of potatoes.

Wet Pots at Plow & Hearth

$35-$45, plowhearth.com

These self-watering pots are made of a terra cotta core surrounded by a glass container. Fill the glass with water, drop the potted plant inside, and it will slowly absorb the liquid. When the pot is empty, just add more water. Ranging from 4 to 10 inches in diameter, Wet Pots are a good size for growing herbs.

(R)

Check out Matt's interview with Kristen Stewart at metromix.com.

'The Runaways' hits power chord

With some leather, some attitude and a no-nonsense manager (Michael Shannon), all-girl rock band The Runaways became an international sensation in the mid-'70s. The group included future rock legend Joan Jett (Kristen Stewart), fiery future solo artist Lita Ford (Scout Taylor-Compton) and waif-like lead singer Cherie Currie (Dakota Fanning).

The buzz: First-time feature writer-director Floria Sigismondi's biopic scored at Sundance and definitely has a story worth telling. It remains to be seen if Stewart can shed the moodiness of "Twilight" and "Adventureland" to deliver real edge.

The verdict: "The Runaways" electrifies thanks to Shannon drooling over rock 'n' roll like an even sleazier Ari Gold, and Fanning, who perfectly balances budding sexuality and youthful naivete. Ultimately, the film is sheer badass entertainment; it neither explores the battle of the sexes in rock music nor focuses on anyone but Currie or Jett, who's told early on, "Girls don't play electric guitars." "The Runaways" simply snarls and rocks its way to showing how a bunch of teenagers changed that.

Public symbol, private struggle

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES Sandra Bullock reached the pinnacle of her profession on March 7, when she won an Academy Award. Her husband, Jesse James, was by her side. He even teared up when she went on stage to accept the Oscar.

Little more than a week later, amid allegations of James' infidelity, Bullock canceled a planned appearance at the London premiere of the movie that won her the prize, citing "unforeseen personal reasons."

But the brand-new Oscar winner isn't likely to experience any professional consequences from this public exposure of her personal pain.

"If anything, it would engender a massive amount of sympathy toward her, and she's already exceedingly well liked," said veteran publicist Michael Levine.

Representatives for Bullock did not respond to calls and e-mails seeking comment Thursday.

Karen Sternheimer, a sociologist at the University of Southern California who studies pop culture and celebrity, said that the infidelity

James' apology

Tabloid reports of Jesse James' infidelity surfaced Wednesday, and James apologized to his wife Thursday in a statement issued through his publicist. "It's because of my poor judgment that I deserve everything bad that is coming my way," he said. He added that "the vast majority of the allegations reported are untrue and unfounded," but offered no other details, saying, "Beyond that, I will not dignify these private matters with any further public comment."

rumors don't challenge popular perceptions of Bullock or James, who has cultivated a bad-boy persona since his days on "Monster Garage."

Marital issues among celebrities "remind us that they're humans," Sternheimer said.

"They might not be just like us, but they go through a lot of the same things," she said, "and it makes people feel all the more connected to celebrities."

March badness

We'll soon know
the nation's best team—but which is the worst?

By Ryan Smith FOR REDEYE

There are 347 teams in Division I men's college basketball, yet all we do in March is obsess over the squads battling for a national championship. What about the other teams, the lowly, sad-sack also-rans that will not get even a sniff of tournament glory this year? RedEye gives the cellar-dwellers their own version of the Final Four. RYAN SMITH IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

N.C. CENTRAL FINAL RECORD: 7-22

Roy Williams' North Carolina Tar Heels threw up a historic stinker of a season after winning the NCAA tourney less than 12 months ago, but the nearby N.C. Central Eagles were much worse. N.C.'s "other" team, a Division I independent, ranked last in the national power rankings. And if it tells you anything, the N.C. Central Eagles Basketball Fanatics fan group on cbssports.com has exactly two members.

RICE FINAL RECORD: 8-23

The Owls get points for being in a better conference (Conference USA) than the rest of the Final Four, but Rice finished 1-16 against the other teams in its league. Perhaps the highlight of the Owls' season was leading top-seeded Tulsa by 15 points in the first half of the conference tournament only to lose by 11. Ouch.

ULTIMATE LOSER

BRYANT FINAL RECORD: 1-29

The Bulldogs came dangerously close to going 0-for-2010, but Bryant edged out a four-win Wagner team 53-51 on the road to finish 1-29. But don't feel too bad for this small private college in Smithfield, R.I.—this was its first season as a Division I school. Expect at least two wins next year, Bryant fans!

ALCORN STATE FINAL RECORD: 2-29

This proud school in Lorman, Miss., has produced good football talent (Donald Driver, Steve McNair), but basketball tends to be lacking. Just ask this year's team, which won two games all season and gave up 36 straight points in a criminally uneven game against Kansas (final: 98-31). Yep, you read that score correctly.

THE TOPIC

What have we learned after two and a half weeks of spring training?

Some magician cut Andruw Jones in half. Where's the rest of him?

Fukudome wasn't built in two and a half weeks.

Ozzie Guillen is just as hard to understand on Twitter.

That Ozzie Guillen likes being on boats and hates traffic. Oh yeah, the Sox played too.

Enter a number between 1 and 9 in the empty squares. The clues are the numbers in the white circles that give the sum of the solution numbers: above the line are across clues; below the line are down clues. Thus, a clue of 3 will produce a solution of 2 and 1, and a 5 will produce 4 and 1, or 2 and 3, but, of course, which squares they go in will depend on the solution of a clue in the other direction. No digit can be repeated in a solution. Answer at reddeychicago.com/puzzles.

'Twilight' stars
Kristen Stewart and
Robert Pattinson
SUMMIT ENTERTAINMENT FILE

'Twilight,' camera, action

Should the vamp franchise have more blood or more laughs? It all depends on the director

Let's say you're an Oscar-nominated director with piles of accolades to your name, and your mantle is filled with golden statuettes. What's your next logical career move? Probably not directing the next "Twilight" movie. Or is it?

Bella Swan herself—Kristen Stewart, that is—recently told MTV that "Dreamgirls" director Bill Condon, "Lost in Translation's" Sofia Coppola and "Good Will Hunting's" Gus Van Sant all are in the mix to direct "Breaking Dawn," the fourth installment of the franchise. And while Stewart told MTV,

"I think it's so cool that they're reaching," her co-star and rumored boyfriend Robert Pattinson seems to have his heart set on one. "I think Gus Van Sant would be great," he told MTV separately.

Now, we wouldn't imagine any A-list director would take on the adaptation of a Stephenie Meyer book, but we'd love to see it! Hiring one of these directors would make "Breaking Dawn" more appealing to genres outside the Team Jacob/Team Edward demographic. ARIEL ALEXOVICH, REDEYE

FOR THE HIPSTER COMEDY CULT Judd Apatow

Edward and Jacob bro out at a Rush concert and trade one-liners about their genitalia.

FOR THE ELITIST FOREIGN FILM CONNOISSEUR

Pedro Almodovar
Edward and Bella's emo love story is well-suited for the Spanish director's sexy film noir tendencies. Possible bonus: Penelope Cruz as one of the Volturi?

FOR MR. THE-MORE- GORE-THE-BETTER Rob Zombie

Buckets of blood. Savage flesh-ripping. Zombie would make werewolf vs. vampire fights a lot more primal.

Bigelow
GETTY IMAGES

FOR THE ACTION MOVIE ADDICT Michael Bay

If there's another dollar that can be squeezed out of the franchise, the "Transformers" director will find it. Expect some gratuitous explosions in Forks, Wash., and Bella in more tight tank tops.

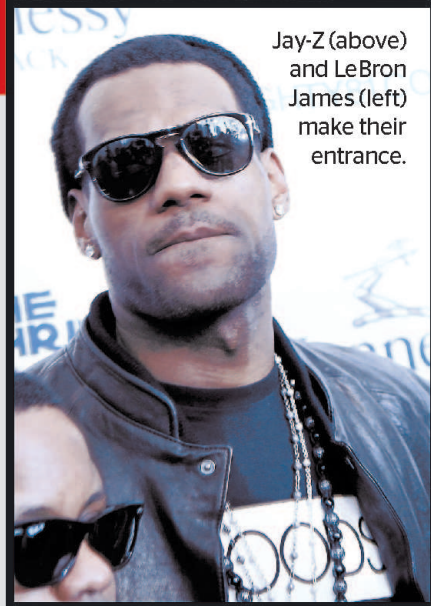

FOR THIS YEAR'S OSCAR PARTY HOST Kathryn Bigelow

Sure, "The Hurt Locker" is an excellent piece of cinema, blah blah blah. What the ex-Mrs. James Cameron needs now is a hefty chunk of change a la "Avatar." Enter "Twilight."

LEBRON'S VIPS

LeBron James' party Thursday at The Shrine in the South Loop was as star-studded as advertised, according to RedEye nightlife columnist Luis Arroyave.

King James rolled up at about 11:40 p.m., followed shortly after by Jay-Z, fresh off of his performance at the United Center.

Neither of the party's headliners stopped for interviews, but word is they both looked good as they walked the red carpet.

Olympic gold-medal speedskater Shani Davis, Bears defensive end Julius Peppers, Bulls guard Derrick Rose and rapper Young Jeezy were among a host of other sports and entertainment stars who joined the fun.

Heigl's close call

If you're going to have a wardrobe malfunction, make sure Billy Bush is there for "support." Katherine Heigl (right) narrowly missed an embarrassing situation Thursday in Las Vegas when her dress strap popped off while accepting the ShoWest award for Female Star of the Year, reports usmagazine.com.

Fortunately, the "Access Hollywood" host ran to her rescue and held her dress in place while Heigl finished her speech.

More bad news for Tiger?

It's not getting any easier for Tiger Woods. After posting more than 100 text messages that she claims she received from the golf star—some of them shockingly graphic—a former porn actress told The Associated Press she may reveal more potentially embarrassing information. If you've read the texts that she posted Thursday, it's hard to imagine what could be more embarrassing.

Clooney hearts Bridges

Is a bromance brewing? The New York Post confirmed that George Clooney (left) didn't vote for himself for the Best Actor Academy Award. Instead, he punched the ballot for Jeff Bridges, who won the award for his role in "Crazy Heart." "According to George, 'it was an amazing performance,'" Clooney publicist Stan Rosenfield said. "He also told Jeff, 'If you don't win, you can't blame me.'"

Casting call alert

Are you a woman age 21 or older who's got a thing for flamboyant NFL stars? Producers for VH1's "The Tournament" will be in Chicago on April 1 to cast for the bracket-style dating show that stars Cincinnati Bengals receiver Chad Ochocinco. Apply at ochocincocasting.com.
